Description

MAHITA's background is not well documented. Whilst it is known it was built in 1939 only one previous owner has been recorded, a Canadian commander called Alex Brown. The 11.58 metre long cruiser is carvel planked and was built in Sydney at A G Williams Drummoyne yard. It has always been a recreational cruiser and no record of any war service has been located. In 2009 the craft was in Victoria. MAHITA is important because it retains the original three level cabin top profile and square cabin windows, a form of styling that was repeated on many Williams's bridge-deck cruisers. The aft saloon is lower than the forward cabin or wheelhouse, but the cabin top is raised again over the aft cockpit.
